THE EVENING CRITIC.

The troubles and antagonisms of the Ad-mistration are, little by little, bringing out bottom facts of interest, writes a Son correspondent. Another phase of the un-derground plottings is coming to light. This is the understanding early existing between Blaine and Garfield as to what should be the action at Chicago, should it appear that Blaine could not obtain the nomination, and or an exchange of votes. Garfield develop-ed no strength in the convention up to the ed no strength in the convention up to the time Blaine's nomination was shown to be impossible, and when it became apparent that a nomination must be the result of combinations. Grant was in the lead—Grant was to be beaten. Blaine could not ominate himself: but by an expert break Se could make the nomination. In accordance with the understanding of some time previous, the break was made to Garfield—anything to beat Grant being the motive in the first place; secondly to get a candidate e first place; secondly to get a candidate nearly as possible the second self of aine. Of course Garfield was the man, and the prior understanding was consum-cel. Garfield's surprise was a sham—a succe of acting for which he was prepared. From that hour Blaine was the prospective Secretary-President; and barring the cross purposes, the original understanding has been observed to the present hour. Herein been observed to the present hour. Herein is to be found the explanation of Blaine's audacious control in the Administration, his domination over Garfield, and the fear with which the latter regards him. Furthermore, the invitation of Conkling to Mentor was for outward show, a stroke to make it open that the Grant men were not to be erlooked, when long before it had been determined the Grant men would be required to take back seats. Robertson for the Custom House was written down, and his name stood there till it was sent to the Senate, the invitation to Conkling, apparently in the interest of fairness and peace, being part of the system of deception and sham arranged between Blaine and Garfield.

There has been no deviation from the compact, only as Garfield, who has the disposition without the stamina of the conspi-rator, has weakened from time to time. The denial of Grant's few requests, after he was invited to make known his wishes, was among the fore-ordained results, as were he falsehoods to Conkling and many others, the from the beginning were destined to receive the treatment that has to the prereceive the freatment that has to the pre-sent hour formed so conspicuous a feature of the Garfield-Blaine Administration. Re-publican Senators, Republican leaders who were originally opposed to Blaine, especially they were for Grant, have felt to the esent hour that they were walled out, at with this Administration they were welcome, and that they need not expect to share in its favors. "No Grant man need apply," was the motto of the Secretary-Presapply," was the motto of the Secretary-President; and Blaine has lived up to it, though at times Garfield has characteristically, though in no important case, weakened.

For this Blaine feels an unspeakable contempt for Garfield. From first to last and fift the time. Blaine men—not in 1830 only, but in 1876—were remembered for services. and anti-Blaine men at Cincinnati and Chicago are remembered for vengeance.

It has been thought strange that certain republicans in different states should be se-lected for the block; in not a few cases it has been especially because they were not for Blaine in 1876. There is a distinguished republican now in Washington awaiting his fate for this reason. There are others who have met theirs, and others still destined to be brought to the block. All this, especially the ostracism of the Grant men of 1880, was free shadowed—the fixed outcome of the Blaine-Garfield compact, of Garfield's treach-ery to Sherman, and of the binding of him-lf over, body and soul, to Blaine, the price of the fulfilment of the understanding to transfer his strength to Garfield in case ine could not be nominated himself.
Thaine knew in the hour of the nomination that in case Garfield was elected and did not prove treacherous to him, as he had to conceded that this great source of human misery may be abated, if not completely extipated, by adopting the following measures: 1. Draining the land. 2. Cultivating it. 3. Employing calcarcoas manures. 4. Embanking land apt to be overflowed. 5. Procuring wholesome drinking water. So far as the President was concerned. Garfield has many times felt it was a hard bargain for him. It is this feeling and the free assumptions by Blaine under it that have caused the estrangement between the President and the Premier.

Still Hunt for the Distilled.

The overworked officers of the Metropol-tan police force continued the still hunt day for violators of the Sunday law the liquor line. In citizens' clothing The liquor line. In citizens clothing and allocuises they provided about with their eyes skinned for wicked mixologists. It was a waterhaul, so to speak. Up to midnight not an arrest had been made. It was clear that salson keepers were as auxious to observe the law as the police were to make arrests, and in very many instances found doors leading into bar-rooms were left standing open for the police to enter and inspect unobstructed, and where doors were closed, curtains were raised or blinds left open in order that the guardian of the peace might er that the guardian of the peace might pect the interior at will. Everything Sinted to a strict observance of the law, and Major Brock was doubtless chagrined on looking over his reports this morning to find that the gleaners had returned from the field empty-handed.

To the Editor of The Critic:
Being an old member of the press, I plead it as an excuse for this intrusion, being satisfied that such fact, coupled with the subfiect causing this letter, will be sufficient to merit your indulgence in the premises.

I am the brother of General W. A. C.

Ryan, formerly of your city, who was cap-tured on the steamer Virginius, and mur-dered by the Spanish authorities in Cuba, November 4, 1873. Among his effects left in Washington at the time of his departure on the ill-fated expedition was a fine dress sword, presented to him by his company when promoted to a captainey in a New York regiment during the late rebellion. The event was engraved on the blade. A scrapbook, containing newspaper articles relating to his public acts, was another article. These two, besides some Cuban flags, were missing when I received his trunks in 1874. Now I am satisfied these articles are in possession of some person or persons in your city. You can easily appreciate what value I place on them as relies, and how astonished I feel that parties knowing of their existence have not endeavored to make the matter public so that I, or my mother, could take easures for their recovery.

My object in addressing you is to ask the favor that you, through your columns, make these circumstances public, with the hope that such action will lead to the recovery of the missing articles.

That my statement here is fact, I refer you to Capt. Jno. W. Fentow, of the Interior

Again asking your kind assistance, and feeling satisfied you will do me the favor asked for, I subscribe myself, your servant to JNO. GEO. RYAN.

Kidwell Bottoms.

A meeting was held in Easton, Md., on Thursday for the purpose of organizing a local board of health, and following this a public meeting was held in the Town Hall, at which a lecture was delivered by Dr. C. W. Chancellor, of Baltimore, on "Malaria and the Means of Preventing its Mischievous Effects." After some introductory remarks, Dr. Chancellor described malaria as an invisible and diffusible vapor, generated apparently under certain circumstances of heat and moisture, in stagnant water, and heat and moisture, in stagmant water, and in damp soils, particularly when accompanied with rank vegetation. Diseases thence arise, which form the peculiar scourge of hot climates, and even of cold climates in hot seasons of the year. It is well known that marshy districts are peculiarly unhealthy. It appears, from tables drawn by Mr. Maret, in which a comparison is made between marsky and mountainous countries. Mr. Maret, in which a comparison is made between marshy and mountainous countries, that one-half of all born in a mountainous district live to the age of 47, whereas the same proportion, in a marshy parish, live only to the age of 25. In the hills one in twenty of all that are born live to 80; in the marshy districts only one in fifty-two attains that age. In most of the counties of Maryland a certain number of the inhabitants annually fall victims to malaria, while in certain districts of Southern Maryland and the Eastern Shore the distemper is so prevalent at times as to interfere, in a measure, with agricultural pursuing the compromised in fraud of their rights and fees. terfere, in a measure, with agricultural pur-

In the summer months malaria is peculiarly destructive. It usually commences about the beginning of June, and does not terminate until the severe autumnal rains in September or October. It unfortunately eneroaches every year on other parts of the State where it was formerly unknown, and there is a peculiarity in the line in which it advances and in the mode of its progress which hitherto the inhabitants have not been able to explain. It is now generally conceded that this great source of human more pressing importance than any other boisterous talking and disturbing the quiet to the people of Washington, and Dr. Chancellor's frightful statistics of the relative mortality in regions subject to malaria should be pondered thoughtfully by those who have the public welfare in keeping.

ABDUL AZIZ MURDER.

Midhat Pacha Denies Participation in It--Serious Accusations Against High Personages. London, June 13.—The Constantinople correspondent of the Standard telegraphs as follows: "Midhat Pacha has addressed a communication to the sultan, stating that personally he had no share in the murder of the sultan Abdul Aziz, but that he assisted in the deposition of Abdul Aziz, be cause the late sultan wished to change th cause the interstitute of the strong conder of succession to the throne, and he was also on the point of sanctioning the Russian occupation of Constantinople. The most curious part of Midhat Pacha's communication is that in which he points out that if Abdul Aziz had not been deposed the the present sultan would not now occupy the throne. Midhat Pacha attacks several high personages, including Mahmond Nedim Pacha, minister of the interior, whom he accuses of having supported Abdul Aziz in his project for bringing the Russian army to Constantinople.

spite the attempts of certain newspapers and persons here to create an opposition through talk of annexation, &c., &c. The articles published by the Chicago papers were copied into those of Mexico, and at first aroused a little opposition; but I went before Congress, and in a short speech told them what I wanted, and they gave me my charter at once. No charter was ever before issued in so short a time. The road will be, in all, about 700 miles long, running from the City of Mexico long, running from the City of Mexico through Pueblo to the Pacific coast, while another branch must go down to the Gulf. It will be a great benefit to Mexico in developing the resources of that country and veloping the resources of that country, and to the United States. The charter provides for the Chited States. The charter provides for the completion of the road in ten years, but in all probability it will be finished in-side of three years. Four surveying par-ties are already at work. I shall very likely return there next winter."
